

Group Photo Encaustic Workshop with Angel Wynn

Group Workshop Dates: Saturdays: April 8th, May 13th

Whether you use a smart phone, point-and-shoot or professional camera to take photos, this workshop is for you! Learn to use the ancient encaustic wax process to enhance your photographs. This fun filled hands-on workshop allows you to create art using your images along with the encaustic process. Your instructor, Angel Wynn, is a long time photographer and encaustic artist. All group workshops are held at the new Encaustic Art Institute located downtown Santa Fe. You will learn a variety of painting processes to apply layers of tinted beeswax to your images and turn them into creative works of art. This class is ideal for beginners or seasoned photographers who would like to explore wax as an alternative means for creating collaged and layered work with a look that is naturally luminous and translucent. Wynn will demonstrate proper glue methods, tools, collage, mixing oil pigments, image transfers, textures, various mixed media processes, hand coloring and more. Wynn also shares valuable information on a variety of papers to use and how to set up your own studio for less. Experience hands-on instruction to create art from your photographs. All supplies, materials and boards are included. You only need to bring 5 to 8 photographs or copies of artwork along with your enthusiasm. No matter if you are just learning photography or want to take your images to a whole new creative level, this workshop will fuel your imagination. Classes are limited to 5 participants so please book early to guarantee your spot.
